About

Irene is currently a Professor & Assistant Chair for the Health and Physical Education Teacher Certification and Graduate Program at Plymouth State University.

Irene has worked closely with NHAHPERD to provide professional development workshops, conference presentations, and keynote for our annual conference preparing health and physical educators as they transition to deliver quality competency-based Health and Physical Education.

Her work is highlighted by a high standard of excellence and an authentic investment in the successes of her students. This is exemplified by her leadership roles, scholarly work in presentations and publications, as well as her service to our profession as a role model, mentor and highly respected resource amongst her colleagues, peers, and her students and in extension their families and communities.
