About

The New Hampshire Society for Technology in Education (NHSTE) is pleased to present the 2022 NHSTE Pat Keyes Technology-Using Educator Award to Dawn Law, from the Moultonborough School District. With more than 38 years of classroom experience, Dawn began incorporating elements of STEM in her classes long before it became fashionable, sharing her excitement for technology and math with colleagues and students at all levels. She implemented the first formal STEM curriculum in her district, developing exciting units connecting math with computer science and robotics, inspiring middle school students to integrate learning from their STEM classes with their math and science coursework. Her efforts have helped raise the level of student performance, empowering them to continue with computer science and technology studies in high school, with several going on to major in computer science at the college level.
